College. It's your time to get ready for what comes next. We're committed to giving you a rich, full and diverse college experience. see the world and make a difference.

GET

2+2+NYC

WE HAVE TWO MAJOR CAMPUSES IN NORTHERN NEW JERSEY — our College at Florham and Metropolitan Campus — PLUS INTERNATIONAL CAMPUSES in England and Canada. We give you all the resources of a major university — like student/faculty research, honors programs and study abroad — plus the personal attention found in a small college setting. And because New York City is within easy reach, you'll find yourself making the Big Apple an integral part of your learning experience.

12:1

LEARNING IS POWERFUL AT FDU BECAUSE IT'S SO PERSONAL. We don't have big lecture halls crammed with hundreds of students. We don't use graduate assistants to teach our classes. You'll enjoy a 12:1 undergraduate student-to-faculty ratio and an average class size of just 20 students. Your professors don't just know your name: they know you.

in life. At Fairleigh Dickinson University, we're experience. So, get ready to discover yourself,

READY

At FDU, you'll be exposed to ideas and activities that will enable you to consider a subject from different perspectives.

100+

RELEVANT, MARKETABLE MAJORS & CONCENTRATIONS.

You'll find more than 100 undergraduate academic programs at FDU. Already know your career direction? We likely have the right academic track for you to achieve your goals. Interested in more than one subject? Our concentrations and interdisciplinary options let you combine your interests. Undecided about your major? No problem! In most majors, you can declare as late as the end of your sophomore year and still graduate on time.

Global

WE CONNECT YOU TO THE WORLD. No matter what your major, your classes will feature a global perspective. That's important because to succeed in our diverse and changing world, you have to understand it. At FDU, you'll interact with students whose perspectives and backgrounds are different from your own.

For example, FDU's WAMFEST (Words & Music Festival) brought together Bruce Springsteen and former U.S. Poet Laureate Robert Pinsky for the first time. After individual and collaborative performances, the two men talked about the creative process, the rhythm of music and words, and conveying meaning using different formats.

Academic choices.
A reputation for excellence.
A quality faculty.

These are the three critical factors that should drive your college choice. At FDU, you'll find them all — and more.

Our academic programs are recognized by the best.

Our high-quality and rigorous academic programs meet the tough standards set by many top accrediting agencies, including the Commission on Higher Education of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools. Our individual schools and departments also hold specialized accreditation — including FDU’s Silberman College of Business, which is accredited by the prestigious AACSB International (Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business). In addition, Silberman College is ranked among Princeton Review’s Best 294 Business Schools nationwide.

"My professors showed me that the harder you work, the more you try to achieve, the better you will feel. They have been there whenever I needed direction. I don't think I would have ever found that kind of encouragement at another school."

GET READY to Learn

Our faculty members are teachers first — but they're also noted authors, producers, educators, scientists, researchers and business leaders.

They write the textbooks used at other universities. They garner critical acclaim for their novels, biographies, art, film and theater productions. They're quoted in national media like The Wall Street Journal, The New York Times, National Public Radio and CNN. They've been executives at Fortune 100 companies and founders of their own businesses. Their research is funded by top federal, state and private sources.

Nearly eight of every 10 faculty members hold the Ph.D. or highest degree in their field.

Our proximity to New York and the connections of our faculty enable us to bring influential and cutting-edge figures to our campuses.

We regularly host leaders from business and industry, government, health care, education, hospitality, the media and the arts on our campuses. They come to serve as panelists at our workshops, keynote speakers at our conferences and guest lecturers in our classes — giving you the chance to hear about the latest developments in your major from true experts in the field.

At Fairleigh Dickinson, we teach the world.

It's been that way from the very beginning. We were founded in 1942, just a few days before the start of World War II, with the goal of giving our students an education that was "of and for the world."

Today, our location puts us in the epicenter of the dynamic New York/New Jersey metropolitan area — a region known for its diversity, innovation and influence.

Our unique programs attract students from all over the world. The ideas, insights and experiences they bring to our classrooms suddenly make a theoretical discussion real and relevant — whether you're studying global warming, the world economy or the health-care crisis.

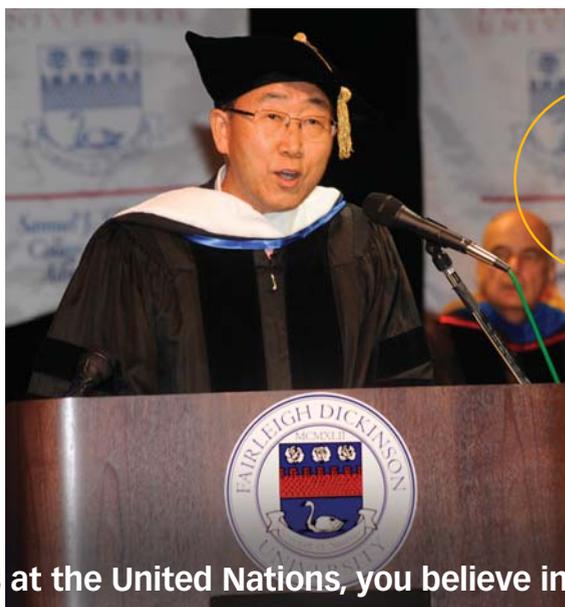

Our global perspective shapes us as a university. It influences our priorities. It inspires what we do. Most of all, it means a very different way of teaching and learning.

Here are four ways we integrate a

1 Our award-winning Core Curriculum creates a shared "common experience" for every undergraduate. It's a journey that begins by looking at you as an individual — and then explores your role in society and the world. You'll be encouraged to think critically, to understand, to challenge — and maybe even change the world in your own way.

In an on-campus address at Fairleigh Dickinson University, United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon praised our University's commitment to global education, saying:

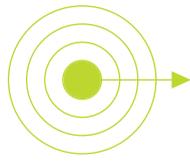

"Like us at the United Nations, you believe in thinking globally in a global age."

Get Ready for a World of New Ideas

You'll have the chance to hear from political and business leaders, cultural icons, award-winning writers and more. In addition to rock legend Bruce Springsteen (see page 1) recent visitors to FDU's campuses included:

U.S. President Barack Obama

Students come to FDU from more than 82 countries. U.S. News & World Report ranks us as one of the top 25 schools for “Most International Students” and “Campus Diversity” among regional universities offering master’s degrees in the United States.

Up to the World

global outlook into your studies:

Our online Global Virtual Faculty™ program links you with scholars and experts from around the world. You’ll have the chance to look at an academic topic from a variety of interdisciplinary perspectives. For example, in an ethics class, you might exchange points of view with a former homicide investigator from Scotland Yard, a human rights activist from Cameroon and a Serbian economist. They’ll bring their experience and their cultural perspective to your studies.

Our close ties to the United Nations give you the chance to hear and interact with international political leaders. Our relationship with the UN began when it was founded in 1942. We’re the first university in the world to be granted special consultative status by ECOSOC (United Nations Economic and Social Council), and our faculty serves on select UN committees. UN ambassadors regularly come to FDU to meet with students. You’ll also enjoy special access to UN briefings and facilities, and consideration for UN internships.

International experiences are encouraged of every student — whether it’s a short-term course, service learning trip or a semester overseas. Why should your college education include studies in another country? Studying abroad lets you see and experience how other cultures and economies work in ways you can never learn from a book. (See pages 14-17 for details about our international campus in England and our students’ study abroad experiences.)

You can almost feel the energy of New York City calling to you at Fairleigh Dickinson. This is the place where people from all over the world come to make their dreams happen — and it's only a short train or bus ride away from each of our campuses. The Metropolitan Campus is just 10 miles from Manhattan; at the College at Florham, you can walk to nearby Convent Station and be in the City within 45 minutes by train.

GET READY for New York

Our close proximity to New York City allows you to try something new, pursue your dream or reinvent yourself. Consider the City your learning laboratory and playground — a place to enjoy solo or with friends.

It's Where Classes Come Alive

New York is an extension of our classes — a learning laboratory to explore with your professors and classmates. FDU faculty members link the City to learning by arranging for their students to:

- Attend art gallery openings in SoHo
- Take a behind-the-scenes tour of a Broadway show
- Visit with officials at the Federal Reserve
- Sit in on a session at the United Nations
- Tour the Egyptian Room in the Metropolitan Museum of Art
- Get an inside view of how top New York hotels and clubs are managed
- Meet with members of the NYPD to talk about crime prevention

You Can Work It, Too

New York City is the Capital of Everything — the world's leading center of law, commerce, art, communication, health care and more — making it an ideal place to search for a job or internship. Current students can be found working throughout the City (see pages 8–11 for examples) at top accounting, investment and law firms, publishing houses and network television giants.

City

“It’s great to be a stone’s throw away from New York City. There’s so much to do: concerts, museums, films and free events. There’s a wealth of internship opportunities, too. I interned during my sophomore year at CNN doing media operations for the Anderson Cooper, Glenn Beck and Lou Dobbs shows. I also spent a summer working on the Afro Punk music festival at the Brooklyn Academy of Music.”

At our campus in England, you can immerse yourself in a new culture — without ever leaving the FDU experience.

GET READY for Wroxton...

Imagine yourself on a magnificent estate in England, living and learning with fellow FDU students in a beautifully restored historic mansion. Add in frequent field trips and extended travel opportunities throughout Europe, and that's what it's like to spend a semester abroad at our British campus, Wroxton College.

Nearly 50 years ago, FDU became the first American university to own and operate its own international campus when it acquired Wroxton College. Your tutorial-style classes are taught by an all-British faculty, and leaders from government, theater, business and education are often guest lecturers.

"One can only learn so much about a foreign culture from a book, lecture or film. The 'wow factor' that I see among my students when they experience first-hand the culture they have studied in the course makes for an unmatched educational experience for both student and professor alike. If our study abroad trip can trigger a passion for learning and traveling as a lifelong pursuit, then FDU has done a great service to its students and its global mission."

Assistant Professor of History

Wroxton College • Oxfordshire, England

Wroxton College is located near Banbury, about 70 miles northwest of London. It's housed in a fully restored historic mansion — named one of Britain's most beautiful living quarters — on 56 acres of breathtaking lawns, lakes and woodlands.

Wroxton has an all-British staff and faculty, a 15,000-volume library and housing for up to 70 students.
