Winnick House is the historic intellectual hub of LIU Post's prestigious Honors College. Formerly the Gold Coast estate of Marjorie Merriweather Post, who built her father's cereal company into the largest food corporation in the U.S., Winnick House is where you will chart your own path to success. You'll come together with the faculty and your fellow students for study, conversation, and a variety of intellectual and cultural events in a truly beautiful setting. The lounge in Winnick House is a place to study, hold meetings, view student art, relax, and meet friends.

ENGAGED LEARNING.

This is how we learn.

In today's highly competitive global marketplace, learning how to brand yourself to employers and creating your own opportunities for professional success are the most crucial skills a career-minded graduate needs. LIU Post's Student-Run Businesses provide all students with a unique engaged learning opportunity to gain hands-on skills that are useful for any career path.

Take the Lead. Students are responsible for launching and managing daily operations of the store as well as marketing the business to students, faculty, staff, and other members of the LIU Post community.

Pay it Forward. These ventures also contribute to the ecosystem of entrepreneurship at LIU with a self-sustaining business model. Half of all profits support LIU scholarships while the other half helps to fund future student-run enterprises.

Long Island's Gold Coast

LAND OF GREAT GATSBY

Originally the estate of Marjorie Merriweather Post, daughter of Post Cereal magnate Charles W. Post, LIU Post's 307-acre Gold Coast campus is right out of the history books. C.W. Post was an entrepreneur of his own time, and today that spirit permeates every aspect of student life. The campus is a mix of vintage charm and modern amenities—giving LIU Post students the opportunity to incorporate history and tradition into a truly unparalleled learning experience.
